

Boy Scouts

ARRL Field Day 2016
Loudoun Amateur Radio Group

The First Tent

A lone Boy Scout starts to set up a tent

The First Tent

But help arrives

Class Training

The Amature Radio Badge training that KD7UIY provides begins with a class style session.

Class Training

The Amature Radio Badge training that KD7UIY provides begins with a class style session.

Field Training

The second half of the class is a walk around the site with an overview of different devices and their function.

Field Training

The second half of the class is a walk around the site with an overview of different devices and their function.

Field Training

The second half of the class is a walk around the site with an overview of different devices and their function.

Field Training

The second half of the class is a walk around the site with an overview of different devices and their function.

Field Training

The second half of the class is a walk around the site with an overview of different devices and their function.

Field Training

The second half also includes watching an active station

GOTA Station

One Boy Scout even made a few QSOs
at the GOTA station

It's Not All Fun & Games

—
Maybe a little bit...

Productivity

This Boy Scout was trying to turn the HT's rubber ducky into a unidirectional antenna.

Socialization

Camp

Some Boy Scouts also camped in the field overnight.

